Antioch theater opens season with award-winning play

By COLIN SELBO cselbo@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH - In an ever-evolving world, certainty can be hard to come by. In their newest production, members of PM&L Theatre are out to cast even more doubts on situations that may otherwise appear to have simple answers.

Located in downtown Antioch, PM&L Theatre opened its 48th season this month with a production of "Doubt: A Parable" under the direction of Charles Lindas. The four-member cast hopes the audience leaves with more questions than answers.

"If you end tonight and everyone agrees with what happened, then [we] didn't do something right," said cast member Ruth Albrecht. Albrecht plays Sister James, a young and ambitious nun teaching at a Catholic school that is rife with controversy.

"None of us have actually discussed what actually happened [at the end]," Albrecht said. "The uncertainty fuels us every night."

"Doubt" is a Tony Award- and Pulitzer Prize-winning drama written by John Patrick Shanley. The play is set in 1964 where St. Nicholas Catholic School is the first to enroll a black

If you go ...

Show times: 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 26, and Saturday, Sept. 27, and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 28.

Place: All shows take place at PM&L Theatre, which is located at 877 N. Main St. in downtown Antioch.

Cost: Tickets are $12 for adults and $10 for seniors and students.

Reservations: Call 847-395-3055 to reserve a seat. The box office is open from 6 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday and one hour and 30 minutes before show time.

child. Albrecht plays the child's teacher, but she is forced to deal with the demands of Sister Aloysius - played by Chris Heilgeist - a principle for whom discipline and order are paramount.

When the order that Sister Aloysius values so highly is thrown out of balance, the characters, as well as the audience, are left full of doubt and hard questions about the right course of action. The lack of order revolves around Father Flynn - played by L. Stephen Phelan - who rarely sees eye to eye with Sister Aloysius. Renee Johnson completes the cast with her role as Mrs. Muller, the lone black child's mother.

Assistant Director Reggie Reynolds believes the lack of a clear resolution is what makes this production so attractive.

"I would like [the audience] to understand that life is a dialogue. You can't go away knowing it's this way or that. There is always more to the story," Reynolds said.

Reynolds said rehearsals for the production began the second week of August, leaving only five weeks before opening night. The limited preparation time did not dissuade the actors.

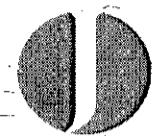

"It's unusual to have a group like this gel as fast as we did," Heilgeist said.

"Most of the work was with the actors to do the lines," Reynolds said. "The set is so simple yet rich. It tells you exactly what you need to know."

The production runs through Sunday, Sept. 28, and tickets are still available for all remaining shows. Reynolds encourages people to call ahead for reservations.

Phelan believes the audience will leave with plenty to discuss on the ride home.

"It's a fun show to talk about at the end," Phelan said. "[The ending] is something they'll argue about a week from now."

A model business: Train store a must-see for hobby enthusiasts and train aficionados

By COLIN SELBO
cselbo@nwnewsgrp.com

Every child's dream is to turn a favorite hobby into a career. With the opening of Antioch Model Train and Hobby this month, Jack Scardina is doing just that.

"I think it's great when you can enjoy [a career] that you really love to do," he said.

At 924 Main St. in Antioch, Scardina's model-train store truly is a family business. His mother, Salona, owns the building and his father, Dominic, helps in the store. His friends also helped in the efforts to make the store a reality.

Scardina's friend Woody Edgell is happy to help out since it gives him a chance to spend time more time working with model trains.

"I've been in trains all my life. I just love trains," Edgell said.

Though some might not like model trains, Scardina said that sometimes it only takes one person to get a family interested.

"My parents bought me a train set, and my uncle had one, too. And we developed a family interest," he said. "I caught a bug."

Scardina wants people enjoy stopping in for a visit.

"I want people to be relaxed and have a good time. It's a family fun store," he said.

Many of the trains Scardina carries are N-scale, which means the model is 1/160th the size of an actual train. The trains are modeled after real trains, with details down to the doors on the side of the car based on the real thing. With all the different models available, Scardina encourages customers to ask for special orders if they do not find the exact model they are searching for.

"It's all about the hunt. Everybody's looking for something," he said.

"We offer quality service and fair prices. It's a fun place to shop," he said. "We're trying to keep these hobbies affordable for people, but we also want to sell quality products."

Hours at the store run from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Scardina said it's best to call for additional hours since he plans to be open more days as the holidays near.

"Christmas is a magical time of the year, and it's magical to have a train around the tree," he said.

Wooden nickels help to improve behavior at Antioch High School

By JOSEPH MULLER
antioch@weeklyjournals.com

ANTIOCH - The staff at Antioch High School has found a new use for the nickel - a reward for good behavior.

Teachers give out wooden nickels to students for good conduct, which allows students to participate in drawings for prizes.

Dean of Students Kathy Kelly said the program allows her school's disciplinary officials to have a more positive role in student's lives. And teachers and students have said the program is working.

"This program has created a good morale climate for our school," Principle Mike Nekritz said. "Teachers are becoming more aware of student's good behavior, and the students are having a good time with it."

Teachers said that since the program started, students have been picking up garbage in the cafeteria and turning in lost cell phones and other items. Students are even warning teachers about possible fights.

Teri Klobnak, a physical education teacher, said students are more aware of different things they can do to help others.

In her gym classes, students are more likely to pick up after themselves and look for ways to help others.

Sophomore Bobby Pollak said students also have helped teachers calm a disruptive class.

"I think the program is great," Pollak said. "And you feel decent after doing a good deed as well."

Kelly said the idea came from an administrator workshop. She said Lakes Community High School was inspired to start a version of the wooden-nickel program.

For each nickel students receive, they can enter into a drawing for prizes. The weekly prizes include a copy of last year's yearbook, sports T-shirts and gift certificates for food.

Students also can enter a once-a-year drawing for prom tickets and a gas gift card.

In the future, Kelly wants to expand the program to teachers.

The school is collecting gift certificates and prizes for the teachers' wooden-nickel program.

Soccer program a hit with kids

By JOSEPH MULLER
antioch@weeklyjournals.com

ROUND LAKE - Through the American Youth Soccer Organization's Important Players Program, all kids are allowed to play soccer, no matter what physical or mental disability they have.

On Sept. 20, children with Down Syndrome, developmental delays and physical impairments were all given the chance to play a soccer game at the Rolek Community Center in Round Lake.

"Our philosophy is everyone plays," said Holly Blanchette, a coach in the Important Player Program. She added that all of the kids get equal playing time.

The Important Player Program gives disabled children the chance to play soccer during the fall and spring seasons.

Blanchette said organizers don't keep the score of their soccer games because they want the focus to be on playing and having fun.

Gary Luz coaches the U-10 team that the Important Player Program participants play with this season. He said the Important Player Program kids enjoy the challenge of playing a normal soccer team comprised of 10-year-old boys.

"We tell our kids to play normal," he said. Antioch resident Michele Lucas said her 11-year-old son, Grant, loves playing soccer. He has been an Important Player Program participant since the program started in the area five years ago.

"He's always asking me when the soccer season starts," Lucas said of her son.

Lucas added that her son has impaired motor skills because of a stroke. The Important Player Program has helped alleviate those issues, she said.

"When the program first started, Lucas had trouble kicking the ball," she said. "Now, sports is one of his strengths. He's a different kid on the soccer field."

County sheriff unloads political bombshells

By John S. Matejevich
gurnee@weeklyjournal.com

Sheriff Mark Curran, after almost two years of relative political obscurity as the Democrat who took control after many years of GOP dominance, recently fired a couple of bombshells.

First, he made national headlines by being booked and fingerprinted before spending a week behind bars - in the county jail.

Curran said he volunteered to find out about the life of inmates and what programs are best suited to reduce recidivism rates.

Well known for his strong faith, Curran said the corrections system, in general, restricts worship, and he believes faith-based programs can help inmates become rehabilitated.

He said it is difficult to reduce recidivism when jail conditions contribute toward hardening criminals.

Just the announcement that he would jail himself brought many comments, some politically motivated, that Curran was pulling off a "publicity stunt."

Curran doesn't run for re-election for another two years, so there can't be any gain for jailing himself.

The second "bombshell" was Curran's endorsement of Republican incumbent Michael Waller as state's attorney. That decision caused havoc among the local Dems and sealed Curran's reputation as a political maverick.

It may not be a phenomenon when a public official votes for or gives quiet support for a candidate from the opposing party. It was strongly rumored that Waller had "spread some good words on behalf of Curran in the 2006 election."

Waller knew Curran when he served as an assistant state's attorney. But, to make an official endorsement, now, that's rare.

No one was madder than former Democratic Vice Chairman Peter Couvall.

As I recall, it was Couvall who suggested that Curran run for sheriff, and no one worked harder to get him elected. So, for him, and other party loyalists, it was a bitter pill to swallow.

The endorsement will do little to affect the outcome of the state's attorney election. Mike Waller will win.

For Curran, the endorsement won't hurt him a bit. Unless something unforeseen happens in the management of the sheriff's office, I believe that Mark Curran will win re-election more overwhelmingly in 2010.

And he will win as a Democrat. The only thing that could change that would be if Curran chose to run for higher office.

Professional Dental Checkup
When you have a dental checkup, the surfaces of the mouth tissues, the lips, the tongue, the gums, and the teeth are examined for signs of disease. The dentist also looks for signs of an abnormal bite or of clenching and grinding of the teeth. The effectiveness of your oral hygiene is also assessed. If you wear dentures, their fit and function will be evaluated. Finally, if tartar is found, your teeth may be scaled to remove these hard, crust-like deposits, then polished and flossed. Your dentist may take X-rays periodically to reveal decay and to detect any bone loss from periodontitis (gum disease). You will also have an opportunity to discuss your concerns and get informed answers. Remember, the only dumb question is the one you didn't ask. Consult your dentist if your dentures become loose or uncomfortable in any way, if your teeth have thermal sensitivity, if your gums bleed, or if you have other oral health problems.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CALL FOR A STATE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

That will be submitted to the voters - November 4, 2008
 To the Electors of the State of Illinois

At the general election to be held on Tuesday the 4th day of November, 2008, you will be called upon in your sovereign capacity as citizens to adopt or reject the calling of a constitutional convention for the State of Illinois.

The 1970 Illinois Constitution requires the electors of the State to decide, every 20 years, if it is necessary to revise or rewrite the Illinois Constitution. In 1988 the electors rejected the call for a constitutional convention, with 75% voting against and 25% voting in favor of convening a convention. At the general election to be held on November 4, 2008, the voters will be called upon to decide whether Illinois should convene a constitutional convention.

EXPLANATION

The purpose of a state constitution is to establish a structure for government and laws. The Illinois Constitution provides citizens with rights and protections; creates the executive, judicial, and legislative branches of government; clarifies the powers given to local governments; limits the taxing power of the State; and imposes certain restrictions on the use of taxpayer dollars. There are three ways to initiate change to the Illinois Constitution: (1) a constitutional convention may propose changes to any part; (2) the General Assembly may propose changes to any part; or (3) the people of the State by referendum may propose changes to the Legislative Article. Regardless of the method of initiating change, the people of Illinois must approve any changes to the Constitution before they become effective.

A constitutional convention is a meeting of delegates elected by the people to review the Constitution. During a convention, the delegates may propose changes to parts of the current Constitution, write a new Constitution, or make no changes whatsoever. If the people of the State on November 4, 2008 decide it is necessary to call a convention, a separate election will be held to elect delegates to represent the voters during the constitutional convention. The elected delegates will meet to review the current constitution and decide whether the constitution should be revised or rewritten. There is no limit as to how long a constitutional convention may meet. The last constitutional convention met for nine months. Once the delegates complete their work, the voters will have an opportunity to approve or reject proposed changes.

The call for a constitutional convention will be on the November 4, 2008 general election ballot. Voters that believe the 1970 Illinois Constitution should be reviewed, revised, or rewritten through the convention process should vote "YES" on the question of calling a constitutional convention. Three-fifths of those voting on the question or a majority of those voting in the election must vote "yes" in order for a constitutional convention to be called. Voters that believe that a constitutional convention is not necessary, or that changes can be accomplished through other means, should vote "NO" on the calling of a constitutional convention.

The constitutional convention proposal will appear upon the ballot in the following form:

FORM OF BALLOT

Proposed call for a Constitutional Convention
 Explanation of Proposed Call

Twin kids can be a challenge

I look at my five kids sometimes and see prepackaged, predetermined little people I'm simply watching over for awhile.

My job is basically not to screw them up too much.

At times, I feel like I'm just someone they stop to ask for directions before heading onto their next destination. And lately, my 2-1/2-year-old twin daughters would rather take another route or simply not stop. Unless, of course, something's in it for them, such as a popsicle.

I'm convinced each of my kids came to me ingrained with certain personality traits I simply must accept.

To fight them is like trying to stretch a sheet over a mattress while someone sits on it. Which brings me to my 2-1/2-year-old daughter Anna.

"Stop!" I scream down the block during a "leisurely" bike ride with my kids. "I said 'Stop!'"

Now, I know Anna can hear me. The neighbors three blocks down can hear me. The people in the plane flying overhead can hear me.

But she pedals faster. I reach her, explain to her like I have, oh, I don't know, every day since the kid learned to walk, that she, "must listen!"

Meanwhile, her twin sister Lilly, is yelling, "Stop, Anna" along with me. She'd rather sit in the stroller holding a cup full of rocks that she gathered in the backyard, her "collection."

But, for the love of God, don't ever take that collection away from her. You'll hear about it for at least the next two hours. She WILL NOT LET IT GO.

As Lilly's temper tests my patience, Anna tests the limits of my sanity.

She's up at 5 a.m. to tell me that her back itches or that she can't find the blanky she's holding or that she'd like to go outside and wait for the school bus. The bus that her big sister won't be getting on until nearly three hours later.

She's the one playing in the toilet or dumping an entire container of fish food into the bowl because the fish was "hungry."

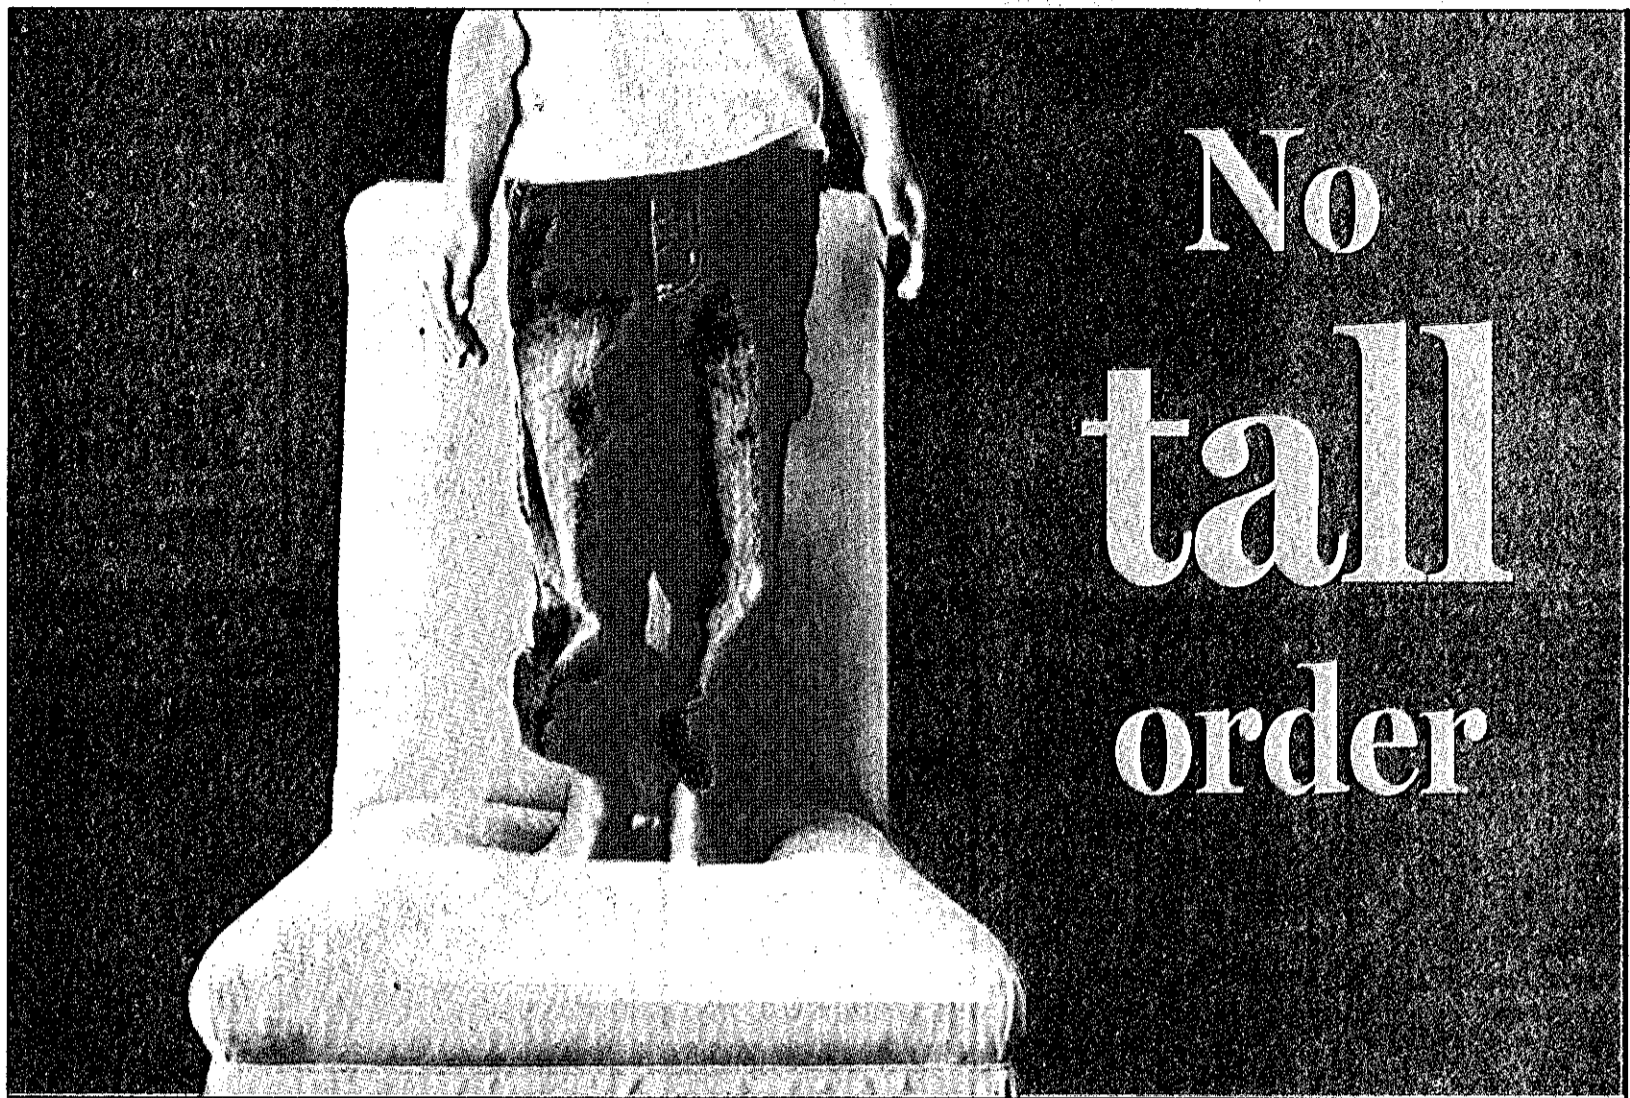

She knows not to go in the road when we're all playing outside. But she'll go to the edge of the driveway, turn to look at me and then slowly place one foot in the road.

"If someone's laughing, crying or screaming, Anna's involved," my mother told me. "You're probably not going to change her. And really, you don't want to change her."

She's right. Of course, I'll keep disciplining all of my children. I'll teach them right from wrong. But I wouldn't want to take away Anna's spunk or Lilly's determination. Instead, I have to tell myself, "That's who they are, love it or not."

And then I choose to love it.

For many children, growing pains aren't a myth

By JAMI KUNZER
jkunzer@nwnewsgroup.com

For many kids, it's a pain to grow up.

Literally. The phrase "growing pains" might bring to mind Kirk Cameron with a mullet, at least for those who grew up during the 1980s when a sitcom of the same name was popular.

But it's actually used to describe what some doctors call a medical mystery.

Growing pains, mostly in the legs, occur in up to 40 percent of all children, according to some estimates. Yet the exact cause remains unknown.

They can strike any time between the ages of 2 to 12, but mainly peak at ages 3 to 5 and 8 to 12.

"There's no consensus about the exact definition," said Dr. Dana Hartwigsen, a doctor of osteopathic medicine at Centegra Health System. "I don't think any kids necessarily have them the same way."

That's likely why they often go undiagnosed.

They most often occur at night, either at bedtime or during the middle of night after a child has been quite active during the day or awake for a long time, Hartwigsen said.

Some children might experience them and their parents never really know. Others, such as 8-year-old Alex Ravagnie and his 5-year-old brother, Arik, don't suffer quietly. "They would wake up in the middle of the night from the pain crying like crazy. Luckily, it doesn't happen that often, but when it does, it's usually a sleepless night."

Sherry Ravagnie, Huntley mom whose sons suffer from growing pains agnie and his 5-year-old brother, Arik, don't suffer quietly.

"They would wake up in the middle of the night from the pain crying like crazy," said their mother, Sherry Ravagnie, of Huntley. "Luckily, it doesn't happen that often, but when it does, it's usually a sleepless night."

Sherry said her husband knew immediately the boys were experiencing growing pains because he remembered going through them as a child.

The boys still get the pain, usually occurring every several months or so, she said.

Their mother usually tries to rub their legs to help them fall back asleep.

Along with massage, doctors suggest heating pads and pain relievers, such as Tylenol or Ibuprofen.

Though some physicians believe the pains actually are caused by growth, others say that's not necessarily the case.

Hartwigsen said she read that the pains are more influenced by the activities of the child than growth spurts, and only occur in up to 10 percent of children. Girls get them slightly more than boys, she said.

They tend to be intermittent, occurring off and on for multiple months in a row, she said.

"The big thing is the child should not have any other symptoms with it," she said.

If the child also has weight loss, fever or swollen or red legs or becomes more tired than usual, it's probably not growing pains, she said.

If any pains keep occurring, it's best to have the child checked by a doctor, she said.

Growing pains tend to occur outside the joints of the legs, in the shins, thighs, calves and behind the knees.

Less often, they can affect the feet or upper extremities, according to Dr. Jack Maypole, a pediatrician and assistant professor of pediatrics at Boston University, who has studied and written about the topic for Wondertime parenting magazine.

He estimated as many as 40 percent of children get the pains, adding that children often get the pains at night.

Dealing with growing pains

- Stretching or leg rubs before bed and after periods of intense activity might help.
- If the child also has weight loss, fever or swollen or red legs or becomes more tired than usual, it's probably not growing pains. See your doctor.

- Help the child think happy thoughts, and work through the pain with mental positivity.
- Remember, the pain usually resolves itself.

Enjoy Dining Out With Kids

(MS) — Many parents avoid dining out with children like the plague. Even the most well-behaved children can get antsy when faced with the new environment of a restaurant. Who could blame them; with so much to see and explore you wouldn't want to sit still either. But you can make it fun to dine out as a family. Here are some suggestions to help.

- Bring a goodie bag: Pack games, toys (quiet ones) and other little amusements that can keep your child occupied for the duration of the meal. Overestimate the amount of time you'll be in the restaurant and pack accordingly. Bring items that he or she has never seen before to hold interest.

- Choose the right place: Pick a restaurant that will camouflage noise well. Casual restaurants will be able to absorb any noise your child will make and not disturb other patrons — they'll probably be families just like yours, anyway. Buffet-style restaurants are also good ideas because someone is always on the go, visiting the buffet selections. This means it won't be a nuisance if you have to take your child for a walk to occupy him or her.

- Use time wisely: Visit the restaurant early so it's not packed with customers or overwhelming. Plus, you won't have to wait long for a seat — something that can prove quite a hassle with a restless toddler in tow. You may also have your choice of seat and be able to sit close to that awe-inspiring fish tank or in an area that is somewhat secluded from other diners.

- It is also a good idea to move along the pace of dining. You may want to skip the appetizers and move right to the main course. Bring along snacks or ask your server to give your child some finger foods (crackers, cheese, slices of fruit) to hold him or her over until the food is served. And don't take out your child if he or she is due for a nap ... it could spell trouble.

- Gauge your child's willingness for new foods: If your child is a picky eater, choose a place that offers familiar foods. If he or she is adventurous, don't worry about trying out the tacos at a Mexican place or the shrimp teriyaki at the hibachi grill.

- Meltdowns can sometimes happen. But every time your child eats out he or she will learn appropriate behavior.

Dining out can be enjoyable with reasonable expectations.

Healthy Foods in School Vending Machines

(MS) — If a student needs a pick-me-up during school hours, he or she may soon only be able to choose from healthy snacks in school vending machines.

In its research into "competitive foods" in schools, those that fall outside the realm of cafeteria foods regulated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the prestigious Institute of Medicine reports that 98 percent of high schools have vending machines, school stores or snack bars that sell junk food. Many elementary schools also have similar purchase opportunities for unhealthy snacks. And it's obvious that students are purchasing and consuming these snacks. According to research, approximately $2.2 billion was spent on junk food at schools nationwide in 2003-2004 alone.

Fattening Foods Have Health Implications

Health experts believe that, in response to increasing obesity rates among the country's youth, these unhealthy snacks need to be removed from school grounds and replaced with healthier options. Childhood obesity can lead to long-term health concerns, such as diabetes and cardiovascular problems later in life. And the ban would not be limited to food alone; beverages would also have to pass muster.

Some schools have already implemented their own vending machine makeovers without the need for legislation. Certain food manufacturers have also joined in the process to offer healthy alternatives for students. For example, a few years ago in Connecticut, healthy vending machines subsidized by Stonyfield Farm became part of Connecticut Team Nutrition's healthy snack pilot project, aimed at developing a state model for providing healthy snack choices.

"Let's face it, when it comes to preventing childhood obesity, food businesses like mine can either be part of the problem or part of the solution," says Gary Hirschberg, Stonyfield Farm CEO and father of three. "Twenty years in the yogurt business has taught me that if students are offered great-tasting, healthy alternatives, they will make the right decision."

Vending Machine Make-over

For schools looking to implement changes, there are ways to ease into the transition of healthy foods and allow students to be more receptive to new ideas:

1. Elect a panel of students who will help choose new products for vending machines. Or, organize a school-wide taste test and narrow down four or five new items.
2. Have students create their own marketing campaigns for new foods, complete with posters and presentations. It's easier for children to buy into new ideas if the people presenting them are friends and classmates.
3. Reveal the "re-launch" of the vending machine. Invite parents, students and school personnel to play witness to the new and improved vending machine. The school or local paper can cover the story.

Teacher Support

Students aren't the only ones who will have to adapt to changes. Many teachers use candy or snacks as a reward/punishment system in their classrooms. They may need to rethink their methods for incentives to either include healthy snacks or to not include food items, since this may create an unhealthy connection to food.

7 Ways to Adorn the Home With Autumn Color

(MS) — The beauty of autumn hues is perhaps only surpassed by the grandeur of holiday lights and trimmings. But before you get set to deck your house in Christmas flair, transform it into an autumnal wonder in time for the month of November and your Thanksgiving feast.

1. Borrowing from the shades of nature is one of the easiest ways to transform interior and exterior into beautiful fall scapes. Take advantage of hardy mums in bold yellows, russets, and oranges to give flowerbeds a fall feel. Put a bunch of burgundy dahlias into a vase and surround it with fresh pears and pomegranates for an easy table centerpiece.

2. Reclaim your youth and get the kids involved in a fun project that can be used to display some fall foliage. Gather good specimens of fallen leaves in bright autumn colors. Place a few leaves between two pieces of waxed paper and seal together with an iron set to a low temperature. Frame the artwork and display.

3. Wreaths aren't just for the winter holidays. Wind evergreen boughs around a grapevine wreath and dot with small gourds and faux or real garlands of leaves. Hang on the front door or over the fireplace.

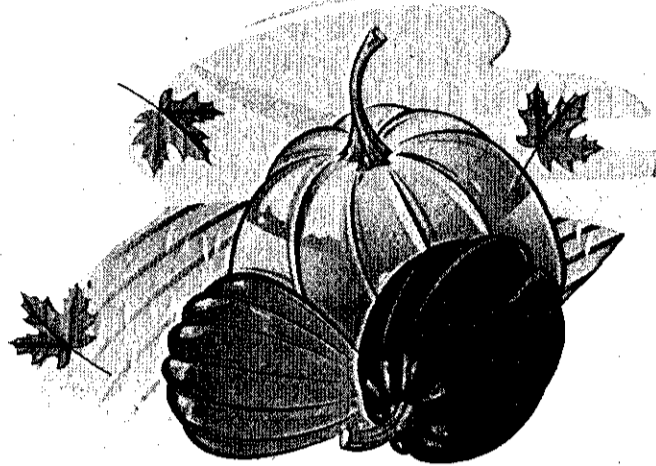

4. Autumn often evokes visions of forests and woodland retreats. Transform any home into a "cozy cabin" by mimicking some of the design styles. Place a checkered tablecloth on the kitchen or dining room table. Wooden ducks or bowls full of pine cones can add some country charm. Rustic wood accents from picture frames to gathered twigs placed in a vase also add to the appeal.

5. Even if you haven't fired up your fireplace for the season, make sure it's a focal point of the room. Place fall-colored candles right in the hearth and drape garland on the mantle.

6. Use gourds, fruit, and vegetables. Fresh fruit and seasonal items add easy color outdoors or inside. Orange pumpkins, speckled gourds, Indian corn, and even yellow squash can quickly put spots of color where you need it. Using fruit and vegetables is an inexpensive way to add impact to decor and centerpiece.

7. Spend a day gathering acorns and pine cones with the kids. Tie a ribbon onto the stems or one of the cone shoots and attach to a cardboard tag. Use these seasonal picks for place cards at your Thanksgiving table.
